ANTI-TIPPING LAWS.

CANADA has enacted an anti-tipping law. It is made a misdemeanor for all parties to the transaction, the tipper, tippee and the employer of the latter. Whether or not it will be possible to enforce such a law is problematical. Its enactment, however, indicates that there is a healthy public sentiment disposed to revolt against paying the wages of waiters, porters, bellboys, baggagemen and others of that ilk who are presumed to be the agents of proprietors of places of public resort.

In the United States and especially in the big cities there has long been more or less unorganized protest against the tipping evil. This is one of the least popular of European importations with the American guests, while it is most popular amongst the landlords. There is no more reason why the patron of a hotel or a restaurant should be obliged to pay a fee for service than there is for the member of a club.

It is an open secret that cloak room privileges in New York hotels bring high premiums to the proprietors, that the wages of waiters run from 50 cents to one dollar a day and that their tips run from $25 to $50 a week.

All through the hotel and restaurant service system of the country runs this unwholesome spirit of graft and gouge. The man who will not tip gets no service. The fool who is lavish with his backsheesh finds decided discrimination in his favor and is primarily responsible for the tipping evil.

The Canadians have recognized the latter's part in the general corruption and would punish him as well as the waiter and the employer.

Some day before the end of time there will arise a boniface who will charge as much and possibly more than his competitors. He will pay his help an adequate wage and cultivate their self-respect. He will not only discharge the man who grafts upon his guests, but he will make it plain that he does not desire the patronage of the obnoxious character who purchases attention by tipping. And that man will make a fortune. Perhaps, in the dim distant future, there will seep into the befogged public intelligence an idea that the person who lodges, eats and acquires comfort in places of public entertainment is the laughing stock and shining mark of the landlord, that he not only enriches that worthy by the extravagant prices he pays for room and board, but that he also is exploited to pay the hire of his servants.

There is little likelihood that this knowledge will cause revolt in the near future, but if it should happen and boycotts and strikes be instituted as well as the enactment of drastic law, it will be but just reparation for the exactions and barefaced extortion which in Canada is considered to have reached the point of intolerance.

If the Colorado national guard had been handled with an eye single to the enforcement of the law and with no squint to political consequences, it could have done the work that federal troops have with the same dispatch and thoroughness. In times that try men's souls politics is the curse of the country.

Villa, realizing the effect of music on the spirits on his men, has encouraged the organization of bands and choruses among them. He has learned that music hath charms to soothe the savage ear.

Long ago President Wilson knew in a literary way that if he be as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, a man could not escape calumny, but now he knows it from personal experience.

No one need be surprised if a resolution is yet introduced in congress to teach our grandmothers how to suck eggs. It would be quite in line with the prairie dog resolution.

The Cook county coroner estimates that there are twelve thousand persons in Chicago who are contemplating suicide. Apparently formed for contemplation.

Tell a woman that she has a beautiful nose and she will at once begin to smell a mouse.

No matter what his form or face the capitalist always has a commanding figure.

The dove of peace appears to have been pigeonholed.

EXPERIENCE

As medical science is making wonderful strides, it becomes necessary that pharmacists be experienced and progressive so that physicians' prescriptions may be properly compounded. We have pharmacists who put knowledge and EXPERIENCE into every prescription that comes to our store.

That is why our prescription department—and business in general—continues to grow constantly. If our experience means anything to you, let us fill your next prescription. It's worth while to feel certain.
